Readers may notice a new element appearing at the start of articles; this is the DOI (digital object identifier). The DOI is a permanent, unique identifier that enables you to cite material published online. The article's DOI will remain the same if the journal's website address changes, or even its publisher, making it the easiest option for identifying and locating a specific article on the internet.

Whenever citing Structural Concrete articles, whether the print or online versions, you should always include the DOI as this will allow the reader to access, at the very least, the abstract of the paper. If you type the following URL into the address bar of your web browser—<http://dx.doi.org/>—and then enter the DOI in the dialogue box presented on this web page, you will be taken directly to the abstract of the article.
